The Canadian Society of Environmental Biologists (CSEB) is a non-profit registered National society, whose primary focus is to further the conservation prudent management of Canada's natural resources based on sound and ecological principles.

The CSEB fosters communications among biologists about Canada's pressing environmental issues. We hold conferences and meetings, lobby government, and work with other organizations to improve natural resource management.

Members are professionally-trained biologists and biology students, from the wide range of environmental biology disciplines. Individuals with other backgrounds are welcome to join as associate members.
